CONTRACT ACTION SUPREME COURT STARTS

An action for a declaration that plaintiff is entitled to refuse 2,198 pounds of English knitthing wool-from-defendant-on-the-grounds that it was not of the quality as represented by shipment samples under contract, commenced vesterday, at the Supreme Court.

Suing the Bunge East Asia Agencies, Inc., for alleged breach of contract, the General Trading Company, of Prince's Building, also claims for the return of a $9,500 deposit, damages and costs of the action.

Agencies, Inc., of Loke Yew ed, and have therefore suffered Building, on the other hand contend that the plaintiffs had made the breach of contract,

Mr. Justice Williams, Puisne Judge, is trying the case The statement of claim alleges that on October 5, 1948, the plaintiffs as purchasers entered into written contract with the defendants as vendors for the purchase of 2,918 pounds, and 10 ounces of "Chief" brand hand knitting wool

About the time of the execution of the contract, the defendants represented to the plaintiffs tha the merchandise was being shipped from the United Kingdom Hong Kong aboard the ss. Eumnes. The defendants also delivered the pigintiffs some samples of weel, and promised that quality of the merchandise cor responded in every respect wi quality of the shipment samples.

Defendants Paid

By reason of that representation and the promise, and by reason of the delivery of the samples, the contract is, by usage and custom of merchants in Hong Kong, one for the sale of goods by sample. Plaintiffs further claim that about the date of the execution of the contract, they paid the defendants $6,500. On the date of the arrival of the ss. Eumeus they paid $2,000 more, making altogether $8,500 as deposit. About October 6; plaintiffs entered into contract with the Kin Wah Knitting Factory, of 9 Yan Chow Street, Shumshuipo, for the resal of the merchandise purchased from the defendants. Plaintiffs represented to the factory that the quality of the goods was the same as the quality of the shipment samples which the plaintiff thereupon delivered to the fac-

The dispute was later subted to arbitration, and the ar bitrator found that: the mer chandise was interior to the shipment samples in appéarance, handling, and quality, Plaintiffs accordingly refused to

Defendants' Denial Defendants deny, they, ever represented or promised that the bulk of the goods would correspond in every respect with the samples as alleged. The contract they say, contains no term that the sale was one by sample. No sample was attached to the contract in accordance with the assage and custom of merchants in the Colony.

The Bunge Agencies therefore counter-claim to have the award by the arbitrator in their dispute enforced. In the alternative, they claim $23,382.18 damages plaintiffs breach of contract in wrongiully refusing to accept the the goods.

Such an alliance would promise if they should be drawn into war with Russia because of their Atlantic pact membership.

It is not known whether such an alliance actually was signed. The Soviet note asking for the or whether Generalissimo Franco merely made the offer pending reaction from the United States.

Wants Credits

Diplomatic Informants - here say, however, the Generalissimo's offer was a move in his drive to chtain American credits for vitally needed raw materials and supplies.

For some time, the Spanish Government has been giving an impetus to this campaign by extending facilities to important American legislators and personalities, as well as to French and British figures, to visit Spain for conferences with Generalissimo Franco and other Government leaders.

The Spaniards seem to think that the best way of combating feeling abroad against the Franco regime is to invite influential foreigners to meet the Generalissimo himself and see the country for themselves.—Associated Press.

With excitement mounting over the London presentation of "A Streetcar Named Desire", we thought you would be interested to see some of the private war-drobe of the leading lady, Vivien

First of all, Francis Marshall and I went along to a rehearsal (prior to the Manchester opening of the play), where we watched Sir Laurence Olivier directing his beautiful, fragile-looking wife

She was wearing the dress you see on the top right of the picture. It is a black, light-weight wool dress designed by Hardy Amies.

Miss Leigh said she practically lived in it, and, for variation, she wears different coloured scarves through that high collar, and ties them in a bow at the front.

The little hat she bought from famous New York hat-designer. Valentina. It is a cleverly cut wool cap, and ties under the hair at the back of the neck.

Vivien Leigh has found this headgear so convenient that she has had it copied in all colours.

"My friends are sick at the sight of me in it!" she said. We con't think anybody could be sick at the sight of Miss Leigh.

Oliviers' charming cottage in Chelsea. You enter through a little yellow door in the wall-up a small garden path beside which pansies are growing-and another little yellow door opens to let you into their small house. (They have a lovely castle in the country as well.)

In the sketch you see Lady Olivier sitting on a dark-red sofa in her sitting-room. She is wearing an evening dress of palegreen satin made for her by Molyneux. The flowers on the dress are Illy of the valley.

The picture on the wall behind her head is a drawing by Roger Furse of "Sabina", the role played by Miss Leigh in "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The evening dress is of brown tulle, embroidered with coppercoloured sequins, and with which is carried a long net stole-also embroidered—just as they used to wear in the Regency Period.

The circss with the wide revers is a neat day-time dress of brown velvet. The spotted dress is deceptive. It is really a blouse and separate skirt, made of green shot taffeta patterned with black velvet spots.

What kind of a house do the Oliviers live in? As always with decoration of good taste, it is hard to define. Outside you see a white house with pale blue-grey paintwork and window-boxes, an impression of a great many flowers.

the hall-cum-diningroom has a wallpaper of little bunches of pale-green flowers on a white background. On this wall hangs a picture of country house. It was painted by John Piper (who has just done murals for the British Embassy in Rio).

New York, October 31. A setback in the stock market accompanied reports of a break in the long drawn-out steel strike. A final burst of selling brought losses of fractions to more than a point. Steel shares themselves held out against the gradual decline until late in the day, when they reacted with narrow gains and losses. and rails declined. Among stumblers were Douglas Aircraft Axle, Chesapeake and Ohio, Union Oil of California, United Aircraft, Lockheed, Phileo, Zenith, Santa Fe and Loews.

The gainers included Melville Shoe, Admiral Corporation, Air Reduction, Benguet Consolidated, fourth most active stock, closed unchanged at 2-1/2.
